

From: Eric Cox
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/17/01 12:30am
Subject: ok...

So, cave in, do what our not really the majority elected president wants you to do.

How can it be good for the economy for a proven monopoly (one the people have known to be a monopoly quite a great while before the courts decided it was) to go unchecked.

It seems rather futile to apply restrictions and reprimands to their rather old school markets. I really hope someone has been paying a good deal of attention to microsoft's recent ventures. They are moving away from their "traditional" market and into the world of reoccurring prices. Ala passport and whatever the latest buzzword is. It is a market of services.

Whatever you do, do not imply restrictions on something solid, imply those restrictions into behaviors, protocols, and licensing...

I'm sorry I have little faith in the judicial government... it has not worked in my favor for many years...

I don't expect you to do what is right for the people or industry. I don't even expect you to do what is right for our government. I don't expect a great deal anymore...

I would just like to see our government is a just a little bit stronger than a greedy corporation. (Publicly held corporations by law and definition are greed driven)

I'm sorry it has to be your heads all our anger will fall on...

Eric Cox
Earthlink Systems Administrator